Makes Attack On Republicans

Speaks At Sessions Held At Erie By Delegation From State

NAME OFFICERS TO HEAD BODY

ERIE, Pa., June 20.—Gov. Geo. H. Earle was on record here today with another sharp attack on the Republican party's leadership, this time challenging them to indicate how they could carry on without trying emergency taxes.

Speaking at a banquet which concluded the state convention of young Democrats here Saturday, the chief executive party candidate for the United States senatorial nomination declared:

"The Republican party would have you believe that it can make bricks without straw—that it can feed the unemployed without levying taxes—that it can provide justice for the unfortunate through the leadership of selfish individuals as Joseph P. Kamp, Joseph Grady and Ernest Wenz."

Then swinging his line of attack on the G. O. P. state office candidates, particularly Jim A. H. James, Republican gubernatorial nominee, he asserted: "The chair of administration would mean ruination to permit legislation enacted because of the callous indifference of the Republican leadership to the needs of Pennsylvania's people over a period of 40 years."

"I need not tell you now what chaos would result," he added, "Charles Alvin Jones, gubernatorial nominee, and state chairman David L. Lawrence also addressed the session."

Officers elected at the concluding business session were: President, Joseph M. Barr, Pittsburgh; first vice president, John R. Turpin, Johnstown; assistant vice president, Kenneth Thompson, Erie; Dr. J. R. Strassler, Wilkes-Barre; and Daniel Swamy, Uniontown; recording secretary, Paul D'Ottavio, Philadelphia; financial secretary, Joseph Sheridan, Greenburg; corresponding secretary, P. J. Firestone, Camphill; treasurer, Isaac Weiser, Klein Reading; assistant treasurer, Marie Noell, York; national committee man, Dr. J. J. McDowell, Schuylkill; national committee man, Mary McInroy, Tiosa.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA PRESIDENT HOPEFUL OF WORLD PEACE

that the vast preponderance of the force of the world is on the side of peace. All that is necessary to keep peace is to keep this force concentrated."

From these diplomatic terms the speaker might translate the statement that Czechoslovakia, France, Russia and Britain are too strong for Germany to dare fight, and so long as these nations make peace their position to defend peace, there will be no war.

"Is time working for or against peace?" President Benes was asked. "I am of the opinion that time works for peace," he replied.

"Every competition has to end, and so has the race in armaments. Some nations have already reached their limit, and some others will reach it soon."

"No nation can indefinitely add to its armaments any more than a tree can grow indefinitely high."

"I do not think it possible for nations to live permanently at their maximum level of armaments. It involves too much strain on economic nerves."

Disarmament Possible

"When the limit of armaments is reached by all concerned, then will come the time when we may hope to renew the effort for international agreement on some measure of disarmament."

In the direction of movement could be changed from more to fewer arms, it might mean a turning point in history."

"I am not sure that the world has never had permanent peace."

"That is true," M. Benes said, "but never before have the manifestly inevitable consequences of world war been so dreadful and so universal."

"This is the first time in history that everyone is agreed that another world war will bring the end of civilization. There will be no victors, only losers."

"Therefore, if those who have the power to make war will realize that out of war may, and in some cases must, come world peace, I am convinced that they will never start it. It is perhaps the strongest factor for peace that nobody will have the responsibility to start a war, the end of which nobody can foresee."

"This skillfully, without naming his neighbor, M. Benes, indicated that if Germany attacked Czechoslovakia, she would fight, and friends would come in to make a world war out of which Germany could not emerge victorious."

The president's confidence in peace continues to be backed by the presence of an army on Czechoslovakia's "military line."

Nine years ago Mrs. Christina Cooke, a widow, was knocked down by a motorcycle in Edinburgh, Scotland, and her right arm was fractured. She has just died at the age of 93 in Northern General hospital, Edinburgh. The doctor certified that death was due to injuries sustained in 1929.

SHAW RE-NAMED COUNTY LEADER BY DEMOCRATS

meeting. He told of the harmony produced at the meeting and said this was brought about by a previous meeting of the Guffy forces at which time the 87 county chairman of the Kennedy-Guffy forces voted to sustain Senator Guffy's resolution pledging harmony.

"The only thing that marred this meeting," said Mr. Stevens, "was the conduct of Mel George, the Lawrence county representative. He voted against the harmony resolution."

As Stevens finished Mr. George rose and asked for the floor, apparently to answer the statements of Stevens. Shaw then told him out of order.

Mr. Shaw then said he wanted to clear up a paragraph which had appeared in a form letter sent out to all committeemen in which it was said that Senator Guffy had invited over the Federal patronage in this county to his representative and that the state patronage would be turned over.

"I have a telegram here from State Chairman David L. Lawrence," said Shaw. He read the telegram which said there was no truth in the statement that he (Lawrence) was turning over the patronage to any but the county chairman and that Shaw would still continue to handle it here.

Prather Takes Chair. Attorney John Prather, chairman of Denver county, was introduced and conducted the election of a chairman. At the call for candidates, Attorney Raymond Humphrey placed in nomination the name of John B. Shaw. Mr. Humphrey lauded the work of Shaw as chairman in the past two years and urged his support. His nomination was seconded by Attorney Elmer O'Neill.

Dr. John A. Mehan placed in nomination the name of Mel George. "Senator Guffy is the No. 1 pie man of Pennsylvania," said Dr. Mehan, "and by pie I mean patronage. Edward N. Jones will be the man who wields the pie knife. Senator Guffy and Jones will conduct this campaign and it seems to me it would be good business to name as chairman a man who has handled the Kennedy-Guffy campaign in Lawrence county."

Attorney Clarence A. Patterson moved a roll call vote and this was carried. It developed soon after the start of the roll call that the Shaw forces had the situation won in hand and at the end of the roll call George had polled but 11 votes.

Shaw re-named the post, as chairman and in a short speech asked for cooperation among the committee members. He promised the same fair deal to those who had voted against him as to those who voted for him.

Mrs. Agnes B. Howley.

Only one name was submitted for vice chairman, that of Mrs. Agnes B. Howley. She was nominated by David L. Lawrence and the vote cast by the secretary.

For secretary two men were nominated, the incumbent Philip H. Stack and Peter P. Cardilli. Like Shaw, Stack made a running race of it and before the roll call was completed Cardilli conceded victory to Stack and the vote made unanimous.

The only contest that developed was that for the post of treasurer. This was a contest as between competing forces within the county committee but a contest between two men, both of whose supporters were allied with the administration forces.

There were three nominations, Joseph P. Travers, Charles W. Miller and Jack Lovell. Lovell was no factor in the race, getting but a few votes, the contest being between Travers and Miller. It was tough and no better in the end as the vote was down the roll with Miller finally winning by a vote of 84 to 78.

By this time it was nearly 4 o'clock, the room was hot and a number of the committeemen had left the room. Chairman Shaw adjourned the meeting without taking action on the usual resolutions dedicating the county committee to the support of the Democratic ticket in November.

steadily falling back before the spreading flood tide of the Yellow River, which now covers most of Northern Honan province. The Japanese are retreating eastward along the Lunghai railroad, and have been forced to abandon for the time being their campaign against Chongchiao, important junction on the railroad arteries, capture of which, incidentally, was reported by the Japanese and then a week ago Chinese armies, however, are also being driven back by the floods, which were loosed at the cost of scores of thousands of lives, to stem the Japanese push.

Japan consequently is retreating on advance up the Yellow River, but there again the rising flood waters may threaten the invaders of their progress. However, and her previous military success at the expense of the booming Yellow and Han Rivers, are now in danger of foundation, according to Japanese dispatches.

Sappers Halt Engineers
Tokyo, June 20. Chinese sappers are actually halting Japanese efforts to Japanese engineers attempting to halt the devastating Yellow River floods, the official news agency Domei charged today.

In a dispatch from Tientsin, the agency said a group of engineers had returned to the city from the flooded region with the encouraging report that breaches in the river might be repaired in a month providing there is good weather. Despite constant fire by Chinese snipers, no repair work was reported.

The flood area was estimated by the engineers at 1,150 square miles with 1,000,000 persons affected. Flood waters of the broadened Tan River are receding, the engineers reported, after evacuating 5,000 houses and rendering 30,000 persons homeless.

Quite a novel miniature garden can be seen near the railroad crossing at the intersection of Morris and Division streets. The garden has been banked up into beds, and is filled with flowers, shrubs, and other plants. It is a very attractive sight, and one that is well worth a visit.

A good point for motorists to remember when serving lemon with fish is that a long wedge is easier to handle than a thin slice cut crosswise.

MR. AND MRS. M. DICKS HONORED AT DINNER

A delightful social event of Saturday evening was that which took place in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. Dicks, R. D. 3, when they entertained informally at a dinner party honoring their son and new daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Merle L. Dicks, nee Kathryn Lou Davenport.

The occasion was planned especially for members of the immediate families of the young couple and a few close friends. The menu was served at the appointed hour at banquet tables attractively arranged in keeping with the nuptial motif. Pink and white tones predominated, and flowers of the same hues were used effectively throughout in the decorative scheme as the hosts guests table a large tiered wedding cake, surrounded with miniature figures, adorned the center.

Those sharing as special guests included the Rev. and Mrs. J. Calvin Rose and son, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Gibson, grandparents of the groom, D. M. Dicks, L. L. Dicks, Mrs. Daisy Slater, George Benedict and Howard Ziegler. Attention was given to a program of informal pastimes during the hours that followed.

Mr. and Mrs. Merle L. Dicks, whose marriage was recently announced, are a bride and groom of March 22. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Davenport of Adams street.

THE WATER TRAGEDY SEASON IS ON

THE beginning of the swimming season is generally marked with tragedy by reports of drownings. In Lawrence county, the first report has already come in.

The tragedy of such deaths is doubled by the fact that a bit of caution, a degree of prudence, would, in most cases, have avoided them. For water, while pleasant and recreational, is also deadly. And it is better to reckon with water's danger before it is too late; most deaths of drowning readily come under the classification, "preventable."

It is customary with the approach of summer to say that everybody should know how to swim. And it is strange that so evident a truth should require so much restatement. For to be able to swim only a few strokes would, in the usual case, mean the difference between life and death. It is only a few strokes to the shore, to the overturned boat, to the log or to the other haven of temporary safety which will keep one afloat until assistance comes. But if you do not know how to swim, you are doomed if the hazard suddenly presents itself.

Oddly enough, many persons—and not youngsters alone—at dangers on the water without thought of their implication. To the majority, perhaps, it does not seem out of place to be toying with this hazard even though they cannot swim.

And even experienced swimmers are sometimes prone to disaster by entering the water after a heavy meal or when over-tired—or to tax their strength or some other feat of endurance which only the person in highly-trained physical condition should attempt.

The obvious conclusion is: If you do not swim, learn how—enough so you'll be able to keep yourself afloat if something should happen on this summer's vacation or on your afternoon at the lake or along the stream.

If you do swim, do not subject yourself to too heavy a strain by violating the rules of common-sense which dictate temperance.

PARENTS AT COMMENCEMENT

A university president suggested last week that the parents of graduates should hold the stage at commencement and receive diplomas for their services, while the graduating seniors take humbler positions among the audience.

He thus brings home with renewed emphasis a major point—that the honors of graduation are not, after all, the work of the student alone. They are the result of the combined work of the student and those who have stood behind him during his collegiate years—the combined work of the bright-eyed young bachelors of arts on the platform, and of mother and dad, sitting white-faced and intense, down below.

The suggestion is given, of course, for the purpose of making a point that needs to be made and re-made a thousand times—not for adoption. This university head has reason to understand the patience, determination and self-sacrifice on the part of many parents which have given so many thousands of young men and young women a college education.

Some may argue, it is true, that this self-sacrifice in many cases was in vain and that the youth and the parents both would have been better off if employment instead of college had followed high school. But this is neither here nor there. The fact remains that self-sacrifice has given Johnny or Molly their chance—a chance that mother and dad, eight times out of ten, did not have.

And dad and mother would not take the stage at commencement, even if they were invited. They will have their reward if the youngsters themselves remember.

LESSONS FROM WAR FRONTS

During the interval of years between the close of the World War and the opening of the war in Spain a theory was evolved, principally by amateur strategists, that the next war would be of brief duration, that it would be terminated swiftly by the power of mechanized units, the destructiveness of planes and the use of deadly chemicals which would exterminate whole populations. This theory has been definitely exploded in Spain and in China.

The world at large knows now what conventional military students have consistently maintained—that the next World War, assuming that indications of the present eventually are brought to fulfillment, will be in its major aspects very similar to the last World War. It will be another of those prolonged struggles, running on from year to year, that consume young men, reduce cities and towns to dust, ravage fields and orchards, drain the lifeblood from the aged, from women and children and leave a heritage of hate for future generations.

At a number of stages in the course of the Spanish conflict, the Loyalists were supposed to be crushed by the insurgents, with the aid of the vast quantity of planes, tanks and men supplied by Hitler and Mussolini. But the anticipated collapse of the Loyalists did not come, and even now it appears entirely possible that the war will last another year or more. Similarly, Japan expected to overwhelm China with her superior equipment, but the undeclared war in China has now been going on for eleven months and it may last years longer.

All of this, while it involves great sacrifice of blood and treasure in these two conflicts, is encouraging because it means that dictators cannot fulfill their cherished purpose of pouncing suddenly on an adversary, crushing him with a terrific concentration of mechanized power, and bringing the adventure to a close in a few months without serious sacrifices. This means peace, a rather precarious peace, it is true, but nevertheless one to be cherished.

"A Chuckwagon in whose car dynamite was found wired to the spark plugs insists he has no enemies." Friends, no doubt, indulging in a little practical joke.

With the passing of the years we have grown in wisdom, as is proved by the fact that something more than a brass band is required to send us galloping off to war.

The Parent Problem

By Garry C. Myers, Ph. D.

ASHAMED OF PARENTS

Recently while exposed in church to a sermon I couldn't keep my mind on. I went woolgathering and this was the word: "I must write a column on children who are ashamed of their home and parents"—no relation, mind you, to that sermon so remote from life.

Of course some parents behave themselves so badly and are so rude to their children and others that one wonders how their children could be proud of them. But most children who are ashamed of their parents and their home are so ashamed because they think their parents and home do not represent so much money, luxury and social prestige as these children have pretended. Truly these children have been trying to deceive, to seem to be what they are not. No real happiness is in this direction.

Unfortunately they think that money and keeping up with the Joneses are of first importance. But these children overlook the opportunities afforded them by the loving and self-sacrificing parents. The sacrifice to show off robes of the virtue of humility—Oh, Humility, where dost thou hide in these days!—robs them of the feeling of appreciation of the rare and lasting qualities in their loved ones.

Unhappily many wonderful and conscientious parents actually train their children to be ashamed of them and their home. When for instance, they have guests, particularly if the guests wear finer clothes and live in more pretentious houses, these parents will apologize for this or that, suggesting that they are ashamed of their relatively humble life and home. They will live above their means and spend far too much money on their children. These parents try to be what they are not, and their children imitating them, grow more deceptive.

Happy In Humble Homes
When I recall visits into homes as an invited guest, the happiest memories are of humble homes in which the parents appeared to be wholly genuine, making no apologies for their simple life and home, but being themselves, happy and over, truly proud and happy, too.

When a boy or girl, young man or woman, feels ashamed of his home because of its simplicity or humility, he should know that there is something seriously lacking in his moral fiber. But there is still some hope for him; he might still recover from the cancer in his soul, if he will set about to name over and over to himself the many lovely, rich, enduring virtues of his loved ones.

We might do more at school, Sunday school and church to help children, but to be proud of them instead. Here is a change in the field of moral and religious education.

Maybe this is just as good education as the one I couldn't listen to. Maybe not.

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

A BAS PATERNALISM

Heretofore a fundamental principle of sound business operation has been the practice of "saving for a rainy day," of building up surpluses in times of prosperity to be used to alleviate the impact of depression. It is in this manner that private enterprise has always sought, so far as possible, to level off the "peaks and valleys" of the economic cycle. Corporate enterprises, during lean years, customarily reduced temporarily on surpluses for maintenance of dividends, wages and salaries.

But now the situation is reversed. Under present tax and regulatory policies, private management either finds it impossible to accumulate a surplus during good years, or, as in the recent case of a leading electric utility, if a company is fortunate enough to have a surplus, federal authority may no longer permit private management to use its own judgment in the distribution of that surplus.

The management of the utility in question had decided to pay a nominal dividend on common stock from surplus, rather than from earnings, for the time being were at low levels. But a government commission stepped in and arbitrarily terminated the surplus as "unearned" and refused to allow the payment of a dividend. Thus the owners and stockholders of the utility were told, in effect, that they were not competent to handle their own property! On the other hand, during periods of prosperity, present tax laws force the distribution of virtually all earnings in dividends to stockholders. Again, the judgment of private management is nullified.

It is in the manner in which Grade "A" paternalism purposes to level off the "valleys and peaks" of the business cycle, the outlook for the future economic security of industries and individuals is about as dark as it could be.

Jimmy Durante's face had been a great help in his climb to success. For Durante is not only an excellent comedian, but he is about the homeliest man in public life and he happens to be smart enough to make capital of what most other men stammer by what appeared to him, an especially homely man.

Stopping directly in front of Durante and hanging on to a strap to keep his equilibrium, he sputtered, "Shay, Mishay, you're the homeliest man in this car." At which Durante smiled benignly, hoping that the smile having expressed himself, would waddle on. The drunk, however, seemed fascinated with the view, squinted hard, and then gibbered, "you're the homeliest man in New York." Jimmy, who had no desire to refute what he knew to be true, continued his forced smile. The drunk evidently felt that his characterization was still inadequate. Swinging with the strap, he did not take his gaze off the view. "Mishay," he hiccupped, "you're the homeliest man in the world." Jimmy now decided it was time to put in a defense. "Listen, you bozo," he said, "I know I'm homely, but can I help that? The drunk appeared to be a bit mollified with the admission. "Noo," he agreed, "I can't help it, butcha don't have 'em seen in public, do yeh?"

Spending For Armaments
Good For Business Say Some
Two Views On Question Given

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The Federal Reserve Board's latest monthly economic review does not specifically recommend increased armament expenditures as an industrial stimulant.

It does, however, mention that, among all industrial countries, the United States has suffered the worst business recession since last fall. It remarks also that other countries' economic activity appears to have been sustained by heavy production for armament purposes.

The inference is rather plain that the Reserve Board believes Uncle Sam might have supported this nation's prosperity in the same way.

IS THIS ITS VIEW?
Congress has, indeed, recently authorized enormous armament expenditures, but it only "authorized" them except to a comparatively limited extent; it did not vote the money to realize more than a relatively small fraction of the authorization.

Little of the actual work is being done, or can be done soon, due to lack of spot cash to pay for it. Or credit, either.

It is hard to interpret the Reserve Board's review otherwise than as an expression of the board's opinion that we Yankees could have kept our own employment more or less up to the mark if we had kept armament-building going at the same rate as less-depressed folk have done.

NO ECONOMIC USE
This reasoning is plausible, in a way. Nevertheless, it generally is recognized that international disarmament or armament limitation is desirable. It makes for peace and all-around prosperity.

Armaments, after all, are of no basic economic use. Warships, for example, carry no cargoes, no passengers. They do not promote trade. They are parasitic, purely.

"NO IMMEDIATE VALUE"
Years ago, when I was an American newspaper correspondent in London, Lord Inchiquin, then one of Britain's foremost warship-builders, was summoned before a parliamentary committee similar to one of our congressional committees as a witness.

He said: "The money spent on a warship or in payment for its maintenance and the upkeep of its personnel might as well be sunk in the ocean, for all the immediate value it has. It is insurance, that is all."

"INSURANCE"
Well, insurance has its utility. Still, it is not productive. In the long run, it is safer to be "per se" than to be insured.

The term "boom-doctrine" had not been invented then, but Lord Inchiquin's proposition, roughly, was that warship-building was "boom-doctrine" in that day. And he was one of its chief beneficiaries.

DISARMAMENT ARGUMENT
A decade ago Congressman Fred Britton of Chicago was chairman of the representatives' naval affairs committee.

He was considered a pretty hard-boiled man-of-war. Nevertheless, he favored armament limitation.

His theory was "Nations will be afraid to fight if they are unarmed." And, he said, "he planned it that way."

A MUCH MORE plausible assumption of why Mr. Roosevelt and his friends have been talking of an extra session—after and not before the election in November—is that he plans to make another effort to revive and pass the departmental reorganization bill. Only the first assurance from his legislative leaders that it could not be successfully done, prevented him from making another fight for this measure last month. It is known that he not only has not given up hope of the bill but is determined to secure its enactment. If the President calls a special session before January, 1939, the bill, having already passed the Senate, can be brought up again in the House with great legislative ease and disposed of one way or another with great speed.

IF, however, he waits until the new Congress convenes, the whole business would have to start fresh. The bill would have to be reintroduced and referred again to the proper committees in House and Senate. This would mean another long series of open hearings. It would mean another long Senate debate and it would afford opportunity for the recreation of the same sort of popular sentiment that brought about his defeat in the House. Also, it is a fact that Mr. Roosevelt will not be as strong in the next Congress as he is in this. Even the administration politicians concede a loss of thirty-five seats in the next House. Clearly, then, the chances of putting through this pet proposal, the rejection of which the President deeply resented, are very much better in a special session of the still existing Congress than in the regular session of the one to be elected in November. These in best position to know believe that if Mr. Roosevelt does call an extra session—and it is true he is considering it—the principal purpose will be to make another drive for his reorganization bill and not to help the railroads. At heart, he is not nearly as much concerned about the latter as he is about the former.

The Great Game Of Politics

By FRANK R. KENT

Extra-Session Talk

WASHINGTON, June 20.

IT IS interesting that simultaneously with the end of Congress there should be an immediate burst of speculation concerning the calling of an extra session, usually a thing which both the legislative and executive branches like to avoid and for which there certainly is no popular desire.

NEVERTHELESS, it seems fairly certain that the subject has already been discussed among the "influential insiders" at the White House and it is authoritatively stated that the President has the call in mind.

Already there are in Washington two divergent opinions as to the reasons for this strange situation in an election year. One group contends that the session will be called in order to force passage of the railroad legislation which failed to get through at the recent session.

THE argument here, as Mr. Arthur Krock points out, is that before many months go by the plight of the railroads, left without any aid, will be such as to create an acute national emergency. Some of the major roads will not be able to keep out of bankruptcy without more help than the R. F. C. is now authorized to extend. Under these conditions, Mr. Roosevelt, putting the blame on Congress for not enacting the railroad legislation urged, could call it back sometime before the election and attempt to do about what he wanted. The reasoning is, that disturbed in the midst of their campaigns, members of Congress would then be eager to accept, without quibbling, whatever remedial proposal was handed them, and rush home to their districts.

THE trouble about this theory is, first, that it is a true-to-subject second, that it ignores the fact that it wasn't the fault of Congress the railroad legislation went off the board at the last session but the fault of the President. Partly moved by dislike of Senator Wheeler, of Montana, with whom he would have had to cooperate, and partly by some of the more aggressive of his radical advisers, who urge that the best thing to do is to let the railroads go through the wreckage Mr. Roosevelt exhibited an almost complete indifference to the plan to aid them. Though the restoration one way or another of railroad purchasing and employing power clearly would be a great and effective stimulant to business, the President's plan to let them behind any attempt in that direction. It is entirely accurate to describe his interest in the legislation as perfunctory. That with this record of refusal to extend aid to the railroads at the time it could have been done most effectively, he should now call Congress back before the election for that purpose hardly seems credible. And, he says, "he planned it that way."

A MUCH MORE plausible assumption of why Mr. Roosevelt and his friends have been talking of an extra session—after and not before the election in November—is that he plans to make another effort to revive and pass the departmental reorganization bill. Only the first assurance from his legislative leaders that it could not be successfully done, prevented him from making another fight for this measure last month. It is known that he not only has not given up hope of the bill but is determined to secure its enactment. If the President calls a special session before January, 1939, the bill, having already passed the Senate, can be brought up again in the House with great legislative ease and disposed of one way or another with great speed.

IF, however, he waits until the new Congress convenes, the whole business would have to start fresh. The bill would have to be reintroduced and referred again to the proper committees in House and Senate. This would mean another long series of open hearings. It would mean another long Senate debate and it would afford opportunity for the recreation of the same sort of popular sentiment that brought about his defeat in the House. Also, it is a fact that Mr. Roosevelt will not be as strong in the next Congress as he is in this. Even the administration politicians concede a loss of thirty-five seats in the next House. Clearly, then, the chances of putting through this pet proposal, the rejection of which the President deeply resented, are very much better in a special session of the still existing Congress than in the regular session of the one to be elected in November. These in best position to know believe that if Mr. Roosevelt does call an extra session—and it is true he is considering it—the principal purpose will be to make another drive for his reorganization bill and not to help the railroads. At heart, he is not nearly as much concerned about the latter as he is about the former.

The everlasting hunger and the oft returning thirst! These are the terrors that face us—the best of us and worst.

And there is pain to suffer. Our own we may endure. But there's the pain of loved ones we lack the means to cure.

These things all men must plan for: Hunger and thirst and pain, fire against the winter and shelter from the rain.

Seek Plan To Aid Railroads

President Considers Many Proposals Administration
Leaders Disclose

WASHINGTON, June 20. — Though congress has adjourned and the opportunity for immediate legislation is gone, President Roosevelt is considering many proposals to save the railroads from a financial catastrophe, administration leaders disclosed today.

Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, has continued his conversations with federal officials as well as members of congress. Today there was an atmosphere of confidence that something beneficial can be worked out shortly.

Among the proposals were known to be: 1. The RFC to enter the open market and buy railroad bonds now selling at a heavy discount; then get the railroads to enter an agreement for reduction of interest charges to a fair return on the current bankruptcy prices for their securities.

2. That the institutional holders of railroad securities, insurance companies, banks, investment trusts, colleges and the like, agree to a writing down of outstanding securities, with interest charges adjusted to the new level.

3. That the railroad employees accept a reduction in wages of about seven per cent on condition that the railroad executives also take slashes in their pay and bond and stockholders agree to a readjustment downward in their holdings.

It is suggested that if the employees will accept the wage cut of about seven per cent, the new wage would be considered "base pay" and when business recovers the employees would be given a formula under which they would share in the prosperity.

The railroad unions have threatened to strike rather than accept the 15 per cent slash in pay recently ordered by the railroad managers and now going through the arbitration procedure set up in the transportation law.

Girl Scouts To Camp At Park July 11 To 22

"If the girls cannot go to camp, then camp has to come to them." At the end of the article—for the development of poise and self-reliance through group activity in the outdoors is an integral part of the Girl Scout program.

Once again, through the courtesy of the Park Commission, arrangements have been completed for the next best thing, the Girl Scout Day Camp, July 11-22, Cascade Park. Here, maintaining the same careful standards of health and safety, as everywhere in scouting, city-bound scouts will have a chance to know some of the joys of sun and wind and wood smoke; to learn some new skills and practice old ones.

C. C. Coulthard, superintendent of Cascade Park, says that he is looking forward to having the Girl Scouts out there and is always glad to have them come back. He says you have only to see this large group of girls being trained to enjoy and use the facilities and natural resources of the out-of-doors in a happy and orderly fashion, to appreciate the real worth of such a project as the New Castle Council has sponsored for the past five years.

Mr. Coulthard hopes that all of the parents will come out and see for themselves what the girls are doing. Camp plans will include a special invitation day to parents and grown up friends of the 'day campers' when the girls will act as hostesses. Other program activities will include photography, archery, outdoor cooking, swimming and boating. This last activity has been arranged through the courtesy of T. W. Eckert.

Dates for Day Camp are Monday to Friday, July 11-15, 18-22 inclusive. (They were incorrectly printed in the folder.)

Miss Helen MacLean, local director, will be in charge, and about twenty local people have volunteered to come out every day and assist with the program. Among these are: Mrs. Regina Popp, chairman of the day camp committee; Miss Leona Sankey, Mrs. C. R. O'Neill, Mrs. George Ward, Mrs. N. J. McCluskey, Miss Rosena McGurk.

Mrs. James Stone will have charge of the swimming and Mrs. Harry Wetlich will be business manager again. Among the older scouts who are assisting are: Blanche Davy, Leah Davis, Marian Connor, Gerry Flick, Elvaine Waite, Maxine Mercer, Marjorie Hildebrand, Rita Metz, Sally Wilson.

Health examination will be held for day camp on July 8, from 9 to 12 o'clock and 3 to 5 o'clock at Girl Scout headquarters, 20 North Mercer street. Dr. Mary Baker and Dr. Rosella Popp have volunteered their services for this added precaution to insure a happy, healthy time for the scouts.

Programs were presented in the afternoon and evening, which was followed by a banquet at 6:30 with guests numbering to 400. During the program I. M. Jaffe was elected as the new president.

Attend Services At Tabernacle

Calvary Gospel Tabernacle Services By Rev. Carrara Ended Last Night

There will be services tonight this week, except Saturday, at the Calvary Gospel Tabernacle. The service will start at 7:30 o'clock each evening with the Rev. Douglas Davies, of Philadelphia, a singer and a preacher of ability, conducting the services.

The greatest day in the brief history of the Tabernacle was witnessed Sunday, when all attendance records were broken with hundreds attending the afternoon and evening services.

In addition to New Castle, many cities and towns were represented at the services, including Youngstown, McDonald, O. Akron, Erie, Butler and a number of others.

The friend, who in the spring of 1936 donated the money for the erection of the tabernacle, was present at the evening services and manifested his great delight in the program which has characterized the new venture of faith since its beginning.

Rev. Frederick pastor of the tabernacle, states that if the interest now manifested in the conference and crusade continues to increase, something will have to be done soon to better accommodate the Sunday crowds.

numbers were additional features of the services. Mr. Carrara concluded his two weeks series with three effective messages, choosing as his sermon subjects, "The Assurance Money," "The Talk of the Town," and "My Life Story."

Approximately 260 highly appreciative friends accompanied Mr. Carrara to the railroad station after the meeting where he boarded the midnight train for New York City.

The group sang hymns as they waited for the train and as Mr. Carrara stood on the platform they sang "God Will Take Care of You." There was a unanimous vote at the evening service for Mr. Carrara to return for the fourth annual conference next year.

Recalls Early Exploits As Slack Rope Walker

When T. Stoner, of New Castle, was performing, he got angry, and said he would walk the rope, and he did.

He got to the top of the third story building, from where the rope was stretched across the street, and against much protest, walked on the rope with his arms out, and the great wonder of the crowd was to see him walk.

One day a man from Drake County came to the athletic grounds, and stated to the men assembled, that he was going to put on a Fourth of July celebration, and would have a slack rope walker.

A piece of drilling pipe was fastened to a tree stump, and stretched across the top of the building, and from there across a hollow to aerrick, and attached to the null wheel to that the rope could be kept tight.

The day of the celebration came, and Crook and Albert were all set, dressed in circus rope walking attire, ready to walk the rope.

When the entertainment consisted of games, music and various contests, and later the guests assembled in the dining room, where a delicious lunch was served at a table nicely decorated with a beautiful bouquet of roses and delphiniums as a centerpiece, places being arranged for 21 guests.

At an appropriate time each member was presented with a lovely handkerchief, and Mildred Kerr and Eleanor McFate were presented with a beautiful bouquet of roses and delphiniums as a centerpiece, places being arranged for 21 guests.

When he came down, the manager demanded the $20,000, saying that he got it unfairly. Will refused to give it, and said he would climb the rope pole for it.

He secured and put on an old pair of overalls, and filled the pockets with dirt, then some on the post before starting to climb, and a little more dirt on as he ascended, and eventually got to the top.

On the 4th of July, 1883, during a celebration in this city, Will walked the slack rope, which was stretched from the top of the Citizens Bank building to the building across East Washington street.

Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Shultz of Warren, O., were Sunday dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Whelan Hopper.

Mr. and Mrs. Clare Rogers and children of Bensenville were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Hanna, Saturday.

Mrs. Wilbur Moore and children, having spent a few weeks at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Meane, returned to their home in Akron, O., Sunday.

Approximately 400 Pennsylvania Motor Police will comprise a special detachment, which will be on duty at Gettysburg from June 23 to July 6 for the 75th anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg.

Graduation exercises for the Pennsylvania Motor Police Training School have been tentatively set for July 6. They will be held in the forum of the educational building at the capitol.

Rockview Penitentiary's grim chair awaits six men within the next month who will be executed for murder unless reprieved. They are Roy Lockard and Michael Fugmann, scheduled to die June 27; John G. Polens, Joe Senauskas and Cesare Della Valle, July 11, and Antonio Peronace, July 18.

Those Paul Perry is undergoing mental tests and his execution date, tentatively set for September 16, will probably be postponed if necessary until the tests are completed. William H. Yeager's death sentence has been indefinitely postponed by court order.

Wages paid out by the general state authority on its 80 projects have passed the two and one-quarter million dollar mark. Of this amount $1,000,000 was paid to workmen taken off the public relief rolls. It was reported, Col. A. S. Janeway, executive director, pointed out the authority has so far furnished more than 2,700,000 man-hours for relief and non-relief unemployed workmen in the construction trades alone.

Municipal training school for local police will be opened July 15 at the Myerstown State Training School. The school will be conducted by the State Motor Police.

The fifth annual convention of the Pennsylvania Motor Truck association, scheduled to meet June 30-July 2 at Bedford Springs, will be addressed by a number of state officials, among them Secretary of Revenue J. Griffith Beardsman, Public Utility Commissioner Percy W. Poole, Speaker Roy E. Furman and Walter A. Jones, Pennsylvania turnpike commission chairman. The convention will discuss problems confronting the motor truck industry.

Following relief, that the defendants be directed to give up the possession of the Calvary Presbyterian church, with all furnishings and belongings, for the use of the members of the said church who still retain membership therein; that the title to the church be turned over to the plaintiffs, that the defendants be enjoined from interfering or obstructing the plaintiffs in continuing to maintain Calvary church, and that the treasurer, Albert Messer, be required to give up the church's cash and full account of his trust as treasurer.

The case arises out of the recent withdrawal from the Presbyterian church of a number of members of Calvary church, among them the pastor, Rev. Raymond J. Fredericks, due to disagreement over modernism and fundamentalism.

The members who stayed with the church tried to use the building but found it locked, according to the petition. They claim that the church is the property of the Presbyterian church while the dissenters claim the title is in the name of the Community church of East New Castle. The petition sets out that the church was started as a mission of the Presbyterian church and that it has been supported in part by the church as a general unit.

The bill in equity is in printed booklet form, another unusual feature of the case. Prothonotary and Clerk of Court John A. Edgar has never before had a case filed in which the bill was printed instead of typewritten.

The law library is a stark looking place just now. The wall paper has been steamrolled off the walls, the floor and carpet are all the floors and the place is somewhat of a mess. Carpet and incense burners were asked for but the one bid received was rejected and the bids must be re-advertised.

Arrangements for the annual convention of the Pennsylvania County Controllers' association were completed at a meeting of the executive committee in Erie the latter part of last week. The county controller of Lawrence county is a member of the executive committee and attended the meeting. The convention will be held in Erie on August 24-25-26. The county commissioners will be meeting in Cornucopia Lake park the same week and a joint dinner will be held in Erie between the controllers and commissioners on August 25.

"Some steps must be taken in the next session of the legislature to control the liquor traffic," Judge Egan said here recently in upholding the state liquor control board on a license revocation.

"It is a terrible condition under the present laws," he said.

"Special consideration should be given to those laws governing the granting of licenses. It's entirely too easy for a person to get a license and responsible people aren't getting them."

Tonight at 5:45 o'clock in the Elks club, North Mill street, members of the New Castle Exchange club will gather for their weekly dinner meeting. Officers will be elected for the ensuing year, during the course of the event.

Royalty Is Coming On Visit To Pennsylvania

(International News Service) HARRISBURG, July 20.—The commonwealth of Pennsylvania will welcome royalty within its borders this month—heading a party of 80 Swedish, Norwegian and Finnish visitors will be Crown Prince and Princess Gustav Adolf of Sweden, accompanied by their son, H. R. H. Prince Bertil.

The royal party will be met off Essexton, Pa., on the Delaware river, by members of the 300th anniversary commission who will accompany them to Philadelphia.

The royal party is expected to visit President Roosevelt while in America and it is expected they will be met while at sea by an American warship which will escort them in.

In addition to the party from overseas, delegates from more than 40 states will be present for the anniversary celebration.

A YOUNG COWBIRD
Editor News:
While walking near the old paper mill a few days ago, I noticed a young cowbird being fed by a song sparrow. I watched the two birds about 30 minutes. They were up in some choke cherry trees on the lower grounds, and I could see them plainly. As I watched, I thought the following might have happened:
A male and a female cowbird had come along and discovered the nest of the song sparrow. Then, the female had laid an egg out of the nest and laid one of her own in its place. When the birds were hatched, the young cowbird had probably taken all the food from the mother song sparrow, and the little sparrows had been crowded out and starved.
This experience often happens birds in nesting time, and is one of the interesting things of Nature.

New York State Election Battle Grows Warmer

Sudden Death Of Senator Copeland Adds To Complicated Situation

TWO U. S. SENATORS MUST BE ELECTED

By LEO W. C. BRIEN
International News Service Staff

ALBANY, N. Y., June 20.—The political situation in New York state is growing more complicated by the sudden death of U. S. Senator Royal S. Copeland.

Party leaders now are faced with a task of nominating not only candidates for the state ticket but two U. S. senators as well.

The term of Senator Robert F. Wagner, junior senator from New York, expires at the end of this year.

Appointment Would Shed Light
Gov. Herbert H. Lehman may shed some light on the Democratic candidate for one of the senatorial posts if he decides to appoint a successor to Copeland who would serve until January 1.

The governor may permit the office to remain vacant until a successor is elected in November.

Senator Wagner has been mentioned in many quarters as the Democratic gubernatorial candidate in the fall. If Gov. Lehman persists in his refusal to seek a fourth term, New York this year will elect a governor for a four-year term for the first time.

In addition to increasing the problems of party leaders in filling the political states, the death of Senator Copeland means that New York will provide one of the major testing grounds for the New Deal in the fall election.

President Roosevelt, it is believed, is anxious that his home state should give him a vote of confidence by electing Democratic nominees next fall by substantial margins. It would be a severe blow to

First School House In Western Reserve Will Be Duplicated

Governors Of Ohio And Connecticut To Dedicate Structure June 29

(Special To The News)

WARREN, O., June 20.—The first school house in the Connecticut Western Reserve, a rough log structure will be duplicated for the Western Reserve Celebration and will be dedicated by the Governors of Connecticut and Ohio on Wednesday, June 29th.

It was in this first log school built in 1801 where the forebears of many prominent Ontonagon learned the three R's. William H. McGuffey, celebrated as the compiler of the Eclectic series of reading and spelling books applied as a teacher but was rejected when he failed to pass the difficult examination. Later McGuffey said his mortification acted as an incentive for further study and to that experience he owed his success in life. McGuffey was later President of Miami University.

The first log school house was a single story structure 18x23 with one door and five small windows. A fire place at one end provided too much heat for some of the pupils and too little for others.

Construction was of chestnut logs, hewn top and bottom and notched to fit. At first there was no glass but only greased paper for windows. Later glass was obtained and its panes were fastened in by tiny wooden pegs.

Pupils in 1801 sat on benches facing the wall. Around the room ran a shelf on which they propped their books. When one was called upon to recite he whirled swiftly about and reversed the process when another was called upon.

The old school house will be duplicated exactly as possible. From virtually every one of the twenty-five townships of the county logs 30 feet long and 8 inches in diameter at their smallest point have been collected and will be fashioned by hand labor in the same rough way as the pioneers did the job.

Edward L. Sutcliffe descendant of a pioneer of the Western Reserve and the man who directed the reconstruction of President Garfield's log cabin home will supervise the construction. The Garfield cabin is at Mentor, Ohio.

In its early day the log school was the center of community interest—there in the evenings the men and women would gather. Debates were a popular entertainment but the women were not allowed to participate. The most popular subject was religion, with discussion of atonement, pre-ordination, sprinkling and immersion. One winter the settlers took turns debating the subject "Which is worse—a scolding wife or a smoking chimney?"

The school house replica will be in City Hall Park on the exact site of the Reserve's first school. It will be a permanent memorial to the pioneers and a place for the Trumbull County Historical Society to preserve relics.

You May Be Called For Jury Service

Audience Provides Jury For The "Murder Of John Faulkner On January 16"

"Who killed John Faulkner on the night of January 16?" If you've asked this question don't answer, it may be used against you. For the murder of John Faulkner will be solved three times, once each of the nights of June 27-28-29 when the Provincial Players present "The Night of January 16."

The jury for the play is selected from the audience and the jury thus selected brings in the verdict it believes is proper. This makes it necessary for the cast to learn two endings and this they are doing. Rehearsals are going on along in splendid shape, sets are built, and the Provincial Players seem ready to put on a production that will do them credit. Their playhouse is at the corner of East Washington and Beckford streets.

Few Babies Score Near Perfect In Physical Tests

Clinical Survey Made In Pittsburgh Shows Unusual Situation

PITTSBURGH, June 20.—In a recent clinical survey here, 950 babies out of 1,000 failed physical examinations. Only 20 were able to score better than 90 per cent—the rest had some type of a physical defect disqualifying them.

The clinic was sponsored by the Pittsburgh chapter of the Lions' club. The object was to find Pittsburgh's "perfect baby."

The result was failure for 950, near perfect rating for 20. Seventy-five local physicians donated their services and gave each child a thorough going-over.

A glance over the score sheet disclosed: Eighty-two of the 1,000 supposed-perfect babies had rickets, 244 suffered from nose conditions, 270 had adenoids, 607 had defective and crooked teeth, 24 suffered from worms, 108 had skin conditions, 50 had ear conditions, 225 had various conditions, glandular conditions were found in 240, abnormal condition of the venous in 393 and 540 more than half had bad posture.

Thirty showed symptoms of heart trouble and 13 had lung disease. A total of 366 had abnormal abdomens and 60 had small hernias. Neurological ailments were found in 140, and orthopedic attention was found necessary in 360. Ten were too fat and 184 showed signs of malnutrition.

Five children had imperfect hands and feet and head and snail conditions and color accounted for others.

A Pittsburgh physician explained: "Invariably the young baby gets wonderful care. It is the neglect in the preschool age that does the child the most harm. Then various physical conditions develop which are undetected and untreated. They, in turn, mar the later life of the individual."

Summer Probes Will Cost Nation About Million Dollars

Congressmen To Start Inquiries

Investigations Will Be Started On Dozen Fronts During Summer

U. S. TAXPAYERS WILL FOOT BILLS

By ROBERT HUMPHREYS
International News Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, June 20.—Congressional investigations will get under way this summer on a dozen fronts covering a wide field of subjects ranging from taxes to labor.

The forays of the probing congressmen will cost the taxpayers close to a million dollars, but it will keep them busy.

It will help solve the depression by giving jobs, because each and every one of the 12 committees will hire a staff. It will give the next congress something to do because each and every one has been solemnly instructed to "report back."

To Speed Up Inquiry
A ten-man senate-house committee investigating the power companies and family states within the Tennessee valley authority, will step up its inquiry to top speed when it goes to Knoxville, July 11 to reopen hearings. This inquiry will cost $100,000.

A seven-man house committee charged with probing into un-American activities will set out in Los Angeles six weeks hence to look for Nazis, communists and parlor pinks. This group has $25,000.

A combination congressional-departmental committee will spend $500,000 hunting out monopolies accused of having a stranglehold on the little man. A similar committee has been given $5,000 to discover ways and means of taxing government bonds and jobholders.

Senator Sherman Minton's committee on lobbying got caught in a senate filibuster against giving it $12,000 and will have to carry on with something like $1,500 it has left in the till. Another standby, Senator LaFollette's committee protecting civil liberties, fared better and got $50,000 for the summer.

Politicking In W. P. A.

"Politicking" in W. P. A. if any, and other election trickery will have to bear the scrutiny of an $80,000 senate committee, while a similar house committee is appointed to see that the congressmen do not get counted out at the polls, will have $20,000.

Other and sundry inquiries will examine proposed changes in laws governing the maritime commission, the interstate commerce commission, and railroad finances.

Two joint congressional committees, both recommended by the president and each having $50,000 to help them out, will probe the steel conservation of our shipyards and our trees. And not to be outdone by congress, two "downtown" agencies, the federal trade commission and the federal communications commission, have arranged for inquiries into the automobile and radio industries, respectively.

Appeal Made To Red Cross

Norman H. Davis Asks World-Wide Red Cross To Try To Stop Ruthless Killing

SITUATION IN SPOTS UNBEARABLE

LONDON, June 20.—The world-wide Red Cross was asked today to try to do something to "restore civilization to a sanity which will at least stop the killing of the helpless and innocent by warlike forces."

The plea was made to the International Conference of Red Cross by Norman H. Davis, national chairman of the American Red Cross following his election as chairman of the board of governors of the League of Red Cross Societies, comprising the Red Cross organizations of 61 nations. Davis is now in London on his way to the 12th annual conference of the League of Red Cross Societies, which is being held in London.

While refraining from openly attacking the ruthless slaughter of defenseless civilians in Japan's undeclared war in China, Davis did say "the suffering of millions of civilians in China has been appalling."

Regarding Spain, he reported that the International Red Cross committee, of which Fred Max Huber is president, and the League of Red Cross Societies have made great efforts on behalf of the suffering in Spain.

According to a certain health authority, it is more or less injurious to indulge in mental work immediately after eating a meal, because of the fact that the blood is taken away from the abdominal organs to the brain and this hinders the process of digestion.

The Human Side Of The News

(By EDWIN C. HILL)
Copyright 1938 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

On Thursday night, 20 persons were asleep in Chatham Castle, the home of Sir Edmund and Lady Davis, near Canterbury. Four dogs were at large on the grounds. On Friday morning Sir Edmund stepped into his art gallery and got a $500,000 shock. On the floor were five picture frames, but missing from the frames were the paintings valued at the price mentioned above. Rembrandt's "Saskia at her Toilet" would fetch a quarter of a million dollars, and with it last year's Gainsboroughs, a Reynolds and a Van Dyck. A 12-inch idol made of pure gold had been left behind, the thieves evidently believing that it was only brass.

"The robbery must have been carried out by an experienced gang," says Sir Edmund. "About six men were involved for it takes at least four to remove a single painting from the wall."

So today Scotland Yard has on its hands the most important art robbery in 27 years, for it was in 1911 that the Mona Lisa was stolen from the Louvre in Paris. That last sentence of Sir Edmund's interview is a bit of a puzzle to him, it brings to mind the fact that the world never has had a full and satisfactory explanation of the theft of Mona Lisa.

The English collector relates how four men were required to remove a painting from the wall. Yet all we have been told of the Louvre affair is that one man took down the painting and walked off with it under his blouse. Now the lady with the most famous smile in history was not painted on canvas. The great Leonardo da Vinci immortalized her on wood—Italian walnut—and the removal of the 20-inch by 20-inch panel from the wall of the museum, with its heavy frame and heavy glass, by one person seems a feat of an impossible task. But we are asked to believe that a young Italian workman did it.

According to the official report of the examining magistrate, M. Drouin, the Mona Lisa, or "La Joconde," as the French knew the picture, was stolen within the hour of 7:25 and 8:30 on the morning of Monday, August 21, 1911. The hour could be fixed from the testimony of workmen who had been discussing the work as the most valuable in the museum. The disappearance made no immediate stir because it was not uncommon that pictures be taken down for repairs or photographs. Thus the thieves or thief had sufficient time to cover his tracks.

Two years later an art dealer in Florence, named Gori, had as a caller a furtive young man who spoke guardedly of a treasure he wished to sell. Gori feigned interest and led him on, to learn that the young Italian was Vincenzo Perugia and the treasure which he was trying to dispose of was the Mona Lisa. Gori played his hand to the end and Perugia was trapped by the police. The Mona Lisa was recovered and Gori received a reward of $5,000. Incidentally Perugia got only a very light sentence, which is another thing hard to explain.

There was talk before the theft that the painting was not an original; even Robert Browning, the poet, writing in his "The Ring and the Book" of "La Joconde," says "a copy contains the Louvre." There has been other talk since the theft, but those who should know are convinced beyond all doubt that the panel hanging in the Louvre is the da Vinci painting of Lisa Gherardini, third wife of Francesco di Bartolomeo di Zanobi del Giocondo, a rich Florentine. He commissioned da Vinci to do the painting, and the artist, more occupied with military engineering, astronomy and mathematics, never finished it. He began it and worked on it during the years 1503 and 1505, and a decade later had the picture with him when he entered the service of Francis I of France, to whom he sold it for $10,000.

The poets talk of Helen of Troy as having a face that launched a thousand ships. Well, Leonardo taught on the face of Lisa Gherardini the smile which has intrigued the world for four centuries and which will continue to do so as long as those questioning eyes and tightened lips may be seen, either in the handiwork of Leonardo or the poorest copyist. Without Lisa, Leonardo would have rated one of the greatest geniuses of all time. Because of Leonardo, Lisa belongs to the ages.

BEES INVADE HOME
OREGON CITY, Ore.—Well, I'll be!

So thought the T. J. Denny family when members awoke to the fact that a swarm of bees had located between the walls of their home.

Thinking to trap the swarm, the Denny family plugged holes in the attic, as well as the radio antenna hole through which the bees entered the outer wall. The attempt failed when a second swarm appeared on the scene and proceeded to unplug the antennae hole so that it could join the first swarm.

FAIL TO CLAIM FORFEITS
Mrs. Anna Laminase, 26 South Beaver street and four persons, were arrested at this place yesterday by Detectives Chief Showalter and Officers Wallace, Hanna and Moore. It was alleged drinking of beer was in progress. Some was confiscated. The woman placed a forfeit as did the men, for a hearing before Mayor Charles E. McGrath today. None of them appeared. Police Chief Ralph A. Criswell stated.

Mrs. J. B. Hill, who presided at the Foreign Missions service which took place Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock, introduced the convention organist, Miss Lois McGill. Miss McGill, who was graduated from Westminster college this spring, is the daughter of the late Dr. R. G. McGill, a missionary who lost his life in Egypt and to whose memory the McGill Memorial library at Westminster college was dedicated. Miss McGill is leaving this fall for Assiut, Egypt, where she will stay three years.

The speakers of the evening were Mrs. A. J. Randles of Pittsburgh, formerly of New Castle, and Mrs. Harriet S. Boobyer, also of Pittsburgh. Mrs. Randles' husband was at one time, pastor of the Second U. P. church, New Castle. Both Mrs. Randles and Mrs. Boobyer are members of the board of directors of the W. G. M. S. They were sent to visit the mission fields by the society and travelled for a period of eight months. Both gave most interesting reports of the customs of the people and of the schools and hospitals they visited. Mrs. Randles chose as her subject "What Mine Eyes Have Seen" and reported on India and the North Sudan. "Christ Shall Have Dominion" was the subject of Mrs. Boobyer's address, covering Egypt and the South Sudan.

There were about 1100 in the evening audience and the devotional service was conducted by Miss E. Roy Martin of Egypt. A solo, "If With All Your Hearts" (Eph. 6:6), by Mendelssohn, was presented by Monas Harlan and the prayer and benediction was pronounced by Dr. J. G. Harl, a retired missionary. ## RESCUERS SEEK MORE BODIES IN TRAIN WRECK train, including the crew. It was possible, McGee said, that several additional local passengers had boarded the train at points east of the wreck scene and he had not collected their tickets.

Some estimates placed the death toll in excess of 60.
Railroad officials divided the 160 aboard the train as follows:
Escaped uninjured, 40; injured, 70; known dead, 25; missing, 22.
Rescuers, working under great handicaps through the night, were concentrating their efforts today on driving pilings across the creek and using a barge crane to lift the last remaining submerged car which is believed to contain the 17 bodies.

This car is rapidly filling with silt and mud as the waters of the creek continue to recede.
Wreck Scene Inaccessible.
The scene of the wreck is almost inaccessible except by airplane and on foot, after roads ankle deep in mud. Rescuers were also hampered during the night by lack of lighting facilities. Battery lamps and headlights of the wrecking train locomotives were entirely inadequate.

Flooding along through the darkness, passengers in coaches who were awake, watched the zigzagging of great bolts of lightning in the distance. They said only a light fall fell before the train reached the weakened bridge.

Suddenly with a great roar, the train and its human cargo turned over into the swirling waters of the creek.
The locomotive and tender, baggage car, mail car, express car, two coaches and two tourist sleepers went into the water.
The locomotive was deeply imbedded in sludge mud. Seven cars were shattered or partly so. The dinner, two standard pullmans and the observation car remained upright.

The wreck occurred in a sparsely settled region near Saults Mont, and it was several hours before word of the disaster reached Miles City.
Use Planes To Cross Creek.
Coroner Ralph Bry of Custer county, one of the first to reach the scene, discovered the twisted mass of steel piled up on the north bank of the creek. Roads run only to the south bank and it was necessary during the early hours to use airplanes and motorboats to cross the creek.

Pray took the bodies of Engineer Frank Merrifield and Fireman H. E. McCoy from the cab of the locomotive. Merrifield was smashed almost beyond recognition and McCoy was badly crushed and mangled.
An additional rescuer reached the wreck a wrecking train brought 66 injured into the city for treatment. None was in serious condition, all suffering bruises, cuts and abrasions.

Water Pours Into Car.
"Then the water began to pour into the car, and I realized we had been wrecked in a river."
I scrambled to a broken window and peered in top of the car. With water lapping at my feet, I sat there for many minutes afraid to try and find out how deep it was, and dazed by the weird lightning flashes that illuminated the scene.
"Steam lashed from the engine tank in the mud. Cries sounded above the rushing water. There-on and I finally stepped into the water. It was about four feet deep at that point. We waded ashore. Discovering that the wreck bottom could be negotiated, we returned and aided about 18 or 20 other passengers through the window of the car and then came into Miles City for treatment."

Stories of passengers who survived the wreck were all in similar vein.
Most of them were either asleep or dozing when the terrible impact came. Many were killed instantly, dreamers as they lay submerged into the muck and mud of the creek bottom. Scenes of indescribable confusion followed.
Members of the train crew played heroic parts in smashing windows

The speakers of the evening were Mrs. A. J. Randles of Pittsburgh, formerly of New Castle, and Mrs. Harriet S. Boobyer, also of Pittsburgh. Mrs. Randles' husband was at one time, pastor of the Second U. P. church, New Castle. Both Mrs. Randles and Mrs. Boobyer are members of the board of directors of the W. G. M. S. They were sent to visit the mission fields by the society and travelled for a period of eight months. Both gave most interesting reports of the customs of the people and of the schools and hospitals they visited. Mrs. Randles chose as her subject "What Mine Eyes Have Seen" and reported on India and the North Sudan. "Christ Shall Have Dominion" was the subject of Mrs. Boobyer's address, covering Egypt and the South Sudan.

There were about 1100 in the evening audience and the devotional service was conducted by Miss E. Roy Martin of Egypt. A solo, "If With All Your Hearts" (Eph. 6:6), by Mendelssohn, was presented by Monas Harlan and the prayer and benediction was pronounced by Dr. J. G. Harl, a retired missionary. The organ prelude was "Andante Cantabile," Tchaikowsky, and the postlude was "Toccata in D Minor" by G. B. Nevlin.

Saturday Afternoon Session.
The Saturday afternoon session, at 1:30 o'clock, was a continuation of the morning's session, reports being heard. The praise service was conducted by Miss Helen C. Sharp, M. D., of India. Reports were as follows:

Treasurer's Report.
The general treasurer of the W. G. M. S. shows receipts for the year ending April 15, 1938, of $358,668.31, and a cash balance of $122,984.39. Total membership reported by the statistical secretary is 52,468. Of this number, 46,316 are in the United States and the remainder are distributed in India, Egypt, the Sudan, Ethiopia, and elsewhere. The department of industrial relief has been changed to that of the Benevolent Department.
Junior work of the general society received major attention on the program. Young people from Mercer portrayed a school in India. Picturesque costumes and good action depicted the work of the foreign missionary in this great field.
Awards for increased membership and efficient in societies showed a decided tendency westward. Of 15 Presbyteries winning honor ribbons, nine were west of Chicago. Los Angeles and Oklahoma carried off silver cups.

Sessions are continuing on Monday and Tuesday with morning, afternoon and evening meetings each day. The Thursday evening session will conclude the convention.

Monday Morning.
Monday morning session was devoted to a continuation of the annual reports of the various secretaries. The devotional service was in charge of Miss Ruth McCleary of Egypt and Mrs. S. A. Foster, second vice president, and Mrs. W. R. Irvine presided.
There was a brief business session at 9:10, with report of committees on memorials and pages. The annual report of the Laymen's and reform secretaries was given by Mrs. Homer S. Boyer of Mr. Lebanon, thank offering by Mrs. O. H. Milligan of Pittsburgh, the young women's secretary, by Miss Ida B. Little, work in the Sudan and Egypt, by Mrs. J. D. Sands of Egypt, O. of the Indian field, Mrs. Arthur B. McBride of Sowley, Women's Association, Mrs. W. A. Krebs, field secretary, Mrs. Miss Sarah E. Burke.

Rev. Roy M. Davis, who is engaged in mission work in the hills of Tennessee, spoke from the subject "Christ, the King of the Mountains."
The quiet hour seatings period was in charge of Miss Kate A. Hill of Eldora, Iowa, who is back in this country after over 40 years of service in the foreign field.
The afternoon was devoted to a period of rest and recreation, followed by a reception and special W. G. birthday dinner at 6 o'clock. The program is devoted to Home Missions when Mrs. Arthur B. McBride, Mrs. Ada Kerr Wilson and Mrs. William S. Cook will preside.

Students from the southern mountain district will be on the program, in addition to the home missionaries from California, the western Indian reservations and the south.
Election of officers for the convention, board members and the magazine committee will occupy the attention of the delegates on Tuesday morning.

train, including the crew. It was possible, McGee said, that several additional local passengers had boarded the train at points east of the wreck scene and he had not collected their tickets.

Some estimates placed the death toll in excess of 60.
Railroad officials divided the 160 aboard the train as follows:
Escaped uninjured, 40; injured, 70; known dead, 25; missing, 22.
Rescuers, working under great handicaps through the night, were concentrating their efforts today on driving pilings across the creek and using a barge crane to lift the last remaining submerged car which is believed to contain the 17 bodies.

This car is rapidly filling with silt and mud as the waters of the creek continue to recede.
Wreck Scene Inaccessible.
The scene of the wreck is almost inaccessible except by airplane and on foot, after roads ankle deep in mud. Rescuers were also hampered during the night by lack of lighting facilities. Battery lamps and headlights of the wrecking train locomotives were entirely inadequate.

Flooding along through the darkness, passengers in coaches who were awake, watched the zigzagging of great bolts of lightning in the distance. They said only a light fall fell before the train reached the weakened bridge.

Suddenly with a great roar, the train and its human cargo turned over into the swirling waters of the creek.
The locomotive and tender, baggage car, mail car, express car, two coaches and two tourist sleepers went into the water.
The locomotive was deeply imbedded in sludge mud. Seven cars were shattered or partly so. The dinner, two standard pullmans and the observation car remained upright.

The wreck occurred in a sparsely settled region near Saults Mont, and it was several hours before word of the disaster reached Miles City.
Use Planes To Cross Creek.
Coroner Ralph Bry of Custer county, one of the first to reach the scene, discovered the twisted mass of steel piled up on the north bank of the creek. Roads run only to the south bank and it was necessary during the early hours to use airplanes and motorboats to cross the creek.

Pray took the bodies of Engineer Frank Merrifield and Fireman H. E. McCoy from the cab of the locomotive. Merrifield was smashed almost beyond recognition and McCoy was badly crushed and mangled.
An additional rescuer reached the wreck a wrecking train brought 66 injured into the city for treatment. None was

Open Air Arena To Open Friday

Plans Shaping Nicely For Staging Of Eight Amateur Bouts

LOCAL BOYS TO APPEAR ON CARD

Plans are shaping nicely for the inaugural of the annual boxing season in the new open air arena where eight open air battles will be staged by the Jefferson Athletic Commission.

A huge canvas more than 175 feet long and eight feet deep has been secured and will be placed inside the tall screen fence. Bleachers have been erected.

Indications are that the bouts will produce plenty of action. The best amateurs at various weights have been matched and no doubt there will be a jammed open air arena when the first bell rings.

Some of the matches arranged are as follows:

Jimmy Sullivan, Golden Gloves champion, Oil City vs. Leo Burnett, Youngstown, 112 pound class.

Harry Reale, New Castle vs. Roscoe White, Oil City, 110 pounds.

Frankie Moran, New Castle vs. Smukey Robinson, Oil City, 125 pounds.

Jack Matthews, Wampum vs. Frankie Karik, Youngstown, 160 pounds.

Mickie Medwick, New Castle vs. Joe Nenech, Youngstown, heavyweights.

Three more matches will have been made today. Each of the bouts will be scheduled for three rounds and each round will be of three minutes duration.

The Mickie Medwick-Joe Nenech bout should be a grand slam. Nenech fought as Joe Eero at the Elks club and the heavyweight produced plenty of thrills one week ago Friday.

The shows have been sanctioned by the A. A. U. and the State Athletic Commission.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Awaiting the Cleveland Indians today carried a game and a half league lead into the important series with the world champion Yankees beginning Tuesday.

The Indians' strengthening of their perch atop the league was one of the features of a thrill-packed

Sunday which saw rookie Johnny the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Red

Sox take over second spot in the junior circuit.

The Indians celebrated Connie

Mack day by handing the Athletics

a 5 to 4 defeat on a five-run rally

featured by Bruno Campbell's home run. Meanwhile, the Yankees lost their second straight to the Browns

10 to 9, the second game of a scheduled twin bill being called in the evening, with the score 7-all, on account of darkness.

The Red Sox went into second place by half a game over the Yankees by downing the White Sox 6 to 1 on Jim Bagby's seven-hit pitching, after the Chicagoans had coped with the opener of the twin bill, 3 to 2, on Gerald Walker's homer.

Washington's six-run rally in the first inning was too much for the Tigers and despite homers by Ross and York—the latter's 17th of the year—the Senators won out, 10 to 6.

Rizzo connected once in the sixth and hit two homers in the night-umph for the circuit for Philadelphia.

Giants Drop Two

Despite five New York home runs

two each by Mel Ott and Harry

Danning and one by Dick Bartell—the league-leading Giants dropped two games to the Cardinals, 8 to 7 in 12 innings and 4 to 2. Curt Davis

cuit for St. Louis.

Vander Meer, coming back after two straight no-hit, no-run games, held the Bees to four hits and, aided by the homers by Harry Craft and

Odds On Louis Will Go Higher

Joe So Impressive In Final
Fling At Fas. Warmup
That Odds Change

By LAWTON CARVER

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., June 20.—After weeks of desultory bull-pen peddling, Joe Louis' final fling at Fas. Warmup, his final fling of his career, was so impressive for his time that the odds on him today were expected to go to 3 to 1 and possibly even higher.

Watch That Chin
That's how hot the champion was as he released for the last time his part in what should be an engaging little tableau to be presented at Yankee Stadium before an expected crowd of 90,000, who probably will bring back the million-dollar gate.

It doesn't make sense that man can look bad day-after-day, then work one good workout leave with things go in. Apparently, and by the time he was through with his four rounds of boxing everybody was reminding everybody else that Louis was out of shape and over-confident when he met Schmeling before.

A few, however, hung to the notion that Louis also did his best blocking with his chin in that other fight—and that he probably always will, especially against the German.

SHOOT FINE GOLF
Dr. George M. Trainor and Angelo "Duke" Monney, pro at the Field club, shot a very fine low ball score of 64 at the Field club course with Trainor having a 2 on the first hole, a 400-yard hole, for an eagle.

He had a tremendous drive and sank his approach shot with an eight-iron. He was playing with Monney at the time. Both had 70s for the 18 holes. Trainor had 35-35 and Monney had 34-36-70.

As far as is known this is the best ball record that has ever been turned in at the Field club course.

NONPAREIL CLUB TO PLAY GOLF
The Nonpareil Rifle club has laid away the rifles for this year and have taken up golf clubs instead to play at the Castle Hills course. The members will meet Tuesday night at the course at 6 o'clock for a club tour.

Because of the large response among the Juniors for the free golf lessons which will be given at Sylvan Heights course through the cooperation of Manager Walter A. Hart and Pro Emil Mandine, it has been found necessary to divide the classes.

The boys will be instructed from 10 to 11 a. m. and the girls from 11 a. m. to 12 noon on Wednesday morning. This course is for all juniors under 21 years of age.

Schmeling Plans Light Workout

Will Leave His Training
Camp Tuesday Morning
For New York City

(International News Service)

SPECLATOR, N. Y., June 20.—Max Schmeling planned a light workout today preparatory to leaving for New York tomorrow morning for his fight Wednesday night with Joe Louis. The German challenger looked "in the pink" to observers, and radiated confidence he will again defeat the Brown Boxing title.

In a last workout yesterday, Schmeling worked a new punch he has been keeping secret during his conditioning here. The punch, a left uppercut to the heart, stopped sparring partner Al Albin dead and he floundered helplessly for a few seconds. Steve Dudas, who lost to Schmeling in Germany last April, and who was watching the workout, jumped up when he saw the blow and exclaimed:

"There it is—that punch. That's the one he used on me with that murderous effect in our fight—that and a fast left hook. Don't be surprised if he finishes Louis with that combination."

The Black Union put in his last full-length training session yesterday, doing eight miles of roadwork, boxing a total of six rounds, and performing the equivalent of five rounds of muscle-limbering calisthenics. Today Schmeling plans only four rounds of sparring and then rest until he leaves for New York.

City Forester Declares 'Possums Are Destructive'

In the past week or so, the opossum seems to have hit the fancy of some of the folk in this city and surrounding district. Possums have been captured, old and young, in several sections of the city, and quite a number have been brought to the forester, Owen Fox, at Gaston Park.

One night, when all ready to retire for rest, he received a phone call from a person desiring him to come and get a female 'possum and four young, to put in his "menagerie." The writer, for information, asked Mr. Fox about the habits and activities of these animals, and he stated that the 'possum is one of the most destructive rodents, that forage our woods today. Many misdeeds that are laid to the owls, hawks, and even the pheasants, are perpetrated by the 'possum. He is a killer, with the lust of killing, and many birds and small fur creatures pay a heavy toll to this prowling killer of the woods, says the city forester.

In his observation in the woods, Mr. Fox has found that in the winter time, when this rodent is in an emaciated condition from lack of food, while walking on a fallen tree trunk, he would fall off on account of his weakness. He will then crawl in those fallen log holes and explore for some creature he can kill and devour.

When the spring of the year arrives, he has been seen taking up the trail of a cock pheasant, and follow him, and listen for his mating call, which will bring him in contact with the female bird, and when nesting activities are in process, this rodent will devour the eggs and in many instances, the hen bird also.

As the 'possum is a great climber, many of the eggs of our finest song birds, never bring forth fledglings that would see the light of day because of this marauder.

Folks have accused the pheasant of killing young rabbits by picking their eyes out, when in fact it has been the work of the destroyer, the 'possum.

One of the main reasons that the 'possum causes so much destruction is because he is a night prowler, like rats, which makes it easy for him to kill much bird life, while the latter are inactive.

A few years ago, the writer's son brought home three baby 'possums, the mother having been run over by a motorist. For a week or so they seemed "awful cute," but when they got out of their box, and hid in the clothes closets, under the furniture, and crawled around the side of the rooms like rats, we were soon glad to give them away.
